Team Name: Angular in the Outfield

Intro

Go around and introduce yourself to the group

1. Name and pronouns
2. What was your favorite thing you learned during Unit 1 or Unit 2?
3. What are you excited to get out of Unit 3?

Setting Group Expectations

You'll need either a Miro board or a Jamboard set up for this activity. Each member should put sticky notes on the slides that you're working on.

Slides

1. What is something that you need to be successful during Unit 3?
 - a. Communication, Communication, Communication
 - b. Working knowledge of version control
 - c. Deadlines for completing parts of project
 - d. Slack check-ins, ask about any issues that have arisen. How are you doing?
 - e. Active in Slack
 - f. Know that every question is a good question
 - g. Share resources
2. What's important for you when you work in groups?
 - a. Communication all the time
 - b. Clear definition of responsibilities
 - c. Open and flexible mindset
 - d. Ability to review code, frontend/backend and vice versa
 - e. Structure during weekly meetings
3. What's something that you are worried about for Unit 3?
 - a. Having enough time
 - b. What the process will look like

- c. Burnout
- d. Refreshing memory of previous concepts
- e. Combining Angular and Java
- f. System setup

After you've spent some time talking through the sticky notes, create a list of the expectations that your group has for their project and how they'll work together.

Expectations that we recommend also having for your group

- Ask for help when needed
- Be willing to help each other instead of displaying an "it's not my job" attitude
- Be flexible to assist with group needs
- Consistently communicate about where you are at with the project
- Attend all group meetings, communicating if you need to miss a class ahead of time
- Treat it like a job, not like a typical group project
 - We will be working on a project that may mimic how you will work on a dev team
 - If you consistently do not show up to work or are not doing the tasks that you committed to completing, you may be removed from the course.
